“Fixed Form” or “Prescribed Form”

• Type of poem where various elements of the poem – e.g., length/# of lines, rhyme scheme, meter – are predetermined by convention/rule, not by the poet

• Examples of “Fixed Form” poems:
“Fixed Form” or “Prescribed Form”

• Why should I care about all these rules and types of poems?
The Sonnet

GOALS:

• Learn how the sonnet works as a form of poetry
  • Characteristics
  • Interaction between form and content

• See how poets make the form and content “dance” within the rules (or bend or break the rules)
A Basic Concept – Rhyme Scheme

• Rhyme Scheme

  • The pattern of sounds that repeat at the end of a line of poetry

  • Designated by lower-case letters

• EXAMPLE:

  Jack and Jill
  Went up the hill
A Basic Concept

• Rhyme Scheme

• The pattern of sounds that repeat at the end of a line of poetry

• Designated by lower-case letters

•EXAMPLE:

The people along the sand
All turn and look one way.
They turn their back on the land
They look at the sea all day.

The Sonnet

Much have I travell'd in the realms of gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expance had I been told
That deep-brow'd Homer ruled as his demesne;
Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:

Then felt I like some watchet of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star'd at the Pacific – and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise –
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

Like as the waves make toward the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end,
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.

Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crowned,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.

And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.
The Sonnet

On First Looking into Chapman’s Homer
By John Keats
(1816)

Much have I travell’d in the realms of gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep-brow’d Homer ruled as his demesne;
Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:
Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star’d at the Pacific – and all his men
Look’d at each other with a wild surmise –
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.
Like as the waves make toward the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end,
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crowned,
Crooked eclipses ‘gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty’s brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature’s truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.
If I profane with my unworthiest hand,
This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this,
My lips two blushing Pilgrims ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Good Pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this,
For Saints have hands that Pilgrims’ hands do touch,
And palm to palm is holy Palmer’s kiss.
Have not Saints lips, and holy Palmers too?
Aye, Pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
O, then, dear Saint, let lips do what hands do,
They pray (grant thou) lest faith turn to despair.
Saints do not move, though grant for prayers’ sake.
Then move not while my prayer’s effect I take.

-- William Shakespeare (1593)
Dancing in the Chains of Sonnet

My God, where is that ancient heat towards thee
Wherewith whole showls of Martyrs once did burn,
Besides their other flames? Doth Poetry
Wear Venus’ livery? only serve her turn?
Why are not Sonnets made of Thee? and layes
Upon thine Altar burnt? Cannot thy love
Heighten a spirit to sound out thy praise
As well as any she? Cannot thy Dove
Out-strip their Cupid easily in flight?
Or, since thy ways are deep and still the same,
Will not a verse run smooth that bears thy name?
Why doth that fire, which by thy power and might
Each breast does feel, no braver fuel choose
Than that, which one day worms may chance refuse?

My God,

where is that ancient heat towards thee
Wherewith whole showls of Martyrs once did burn,
Besides their other flames?

Doth Poetry

Wear Venus’ livery?

only serve her turn?

Why are not Sonnets made of Thee?

and layes

Upon thine Altar burnt?

Cannot thy love

Heighten a spirit to sound out thy praise
As well as any she?

Cannot thy Dove

Out-strip their Cupid easily in flight?

Or,

since thy ways are deep and still the same,
Will not a verse run smooth that bears thy name?

Why doth that fire,

Sonnet VII

and what were roses. Perfume? for I do forget . . . . Or mere Music mounting unsurely twilight but here were something more maturely childish, more beautiful almost than you.

Yet if not flower, tell me softly who be these haunters of dreams always demurely halfsmiling from cool faces, moving purely with muted step, yet somewhat proudly too are they not ladies, ladies of my dreams justly touching roses their fingers whitely live by?

or better,
queens, queens laughing lightly crowned with far colours, thinking very much
Of nothing and whom dawn loves most to touch

wishing by willows, bending upon streams?
The world is charged with the grandeur of God.
    It will flame out like shining from shook foil;
    It gathers to a greatness, like the ooze of oil
Crushed. Why do men then now not reck his rod?
Generations have trod, have trod, have trod;
    And all is seared with trade; bleared, smeared with toil;
    And wears man’s smudge and shares man’s smell: the soil
Is bare now, nor can foot feel, being shod.

And for all this, nature is never spent;
    There lives the dearest freshness deep down things;
And though the last lights off the black West went
    Oh, morning, at the brown brink eastward, springs –
Because the Holy Ghost over the bent
World broods with warm breast and with ah! bright wings.

My debts are manifold and various;
First, Stanford University
Where, with progressively precarious
Nurture, my tardy Ph. D.
Has waxed, and waxes, lax and sickly.
Second, to friends who’ve read this, quickly
Advised me to desist and cease,
Or burbled, “What a masterpiece!”
Or smoothed my steps with sage suggestion.
Third, to John and Susan Hughes
For refuge, friendship, ears, and views.
And, fourth, to you, who did not question
The crude credentials of this verse
But backed your brashness with your purse.
Caught – the bubble
in the spirit-level,
a creature divided;
and the compass needle
wobbling and wavering
undecided.
Freed – the broken
thermometer’s mercury
running away;
and the rainbow-bird
from the narrow bevel
of the empty mirror, flying wherever
it feels like, gay!

(1968)

Sometimes I’m happy: la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Tum tum ti tum. La la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Hey nonny nonny. La la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Vo do di o do. Poo poo pi doo. La la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Whack a doo. La la la la la la Sh-Boom, sh-boom. La la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Dum di dum. La la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la. Tra la la. Tra la la la la la la la la la la la. Yeah yeah yeah.
The Sonnet

Francesco Petrarca
(“Petrarch”)
1304 - 1374

• Scholar and poet

• Major player in the development of the Italian Renaissance

• Traveled extensively throughout Europe

• Did not invent the sonnet form, but made it popular
If it’s not love, then what is it I feel;
But if it’s love, by God, what is this thing?
If good, why then the bitter mortal sting?
If bad, then why is every torment sweet?

If I burn willingly, why weep and grieve?
And if against my will, what good lamenting?
O living death, O pleasurable harm,
How can you rule me if I not consent?

And if I do consent, it’s wrong to grieve.
Caught in contrasting winds in a frail boat
On the high seas I am without a helm,

So light of wisdom, so laden of error,
That I myself do not know what I want,
And shiver in midsummer, burn in winter.
Sonnet

(2003)

All we need is fourteen lines, well, thirteen now,
And after this one just a dozen
To launch a little ship on love’s storm-tossed seas,
Then only ten more left like rows of beans.
How easily it goes unless you get Elizabethan
And insist the iambic bongos must be played
And rhymes positioned at the ends of lines,
One for every station of the cross.

But hang on here while we make the turn
Into the final six where all will be resolved,
Where longing and heartache will find an end,
Where Laura will tell Petrarch to put down his pen,
Take off those crazy medieval tights,
Blow out the lights, and come at last to bed.
